Home Inspection LCC shows our commitment to protecting both your family and your most valuable investment by only hiring the most educated and experienced certified inspectors. Our team meets and exceeds industry standards and represents the best in their field. In addition to being well-versed in industry best practices, our inspectors also bring an extensive knowledge of home building and construction to each job. This wealth of experience means that they have a firsthand knowledge of where to look for hidden issues and how to identify potential hazards. Ultimately, any home consists of three main components: structural, mechanical and finishes. The right home inspector will not only look for obvious problems with these different components, but go the extra-mile to conduct a meticulous inspection that seeks to uncover any hidden problems. An inexperienced home inspector could end up costing you thousands of dollars in repairs that dramatically increase the price of the home. At Home Inspection LCC, our inspectors provide the ideal balance of education and practical field experience that includes decades of working in construction. In fact, James Jones, the founder of Home In
